

biological unit processes

Treatment methods in which the removal or conversion of constituents is brought about by biological activity; primarily used to remove the biodegradable organic constituents through conversion to cell tissue or gases; also used to remove nutrients (nitrogen and phosphorus).