

plug flow

Process in which fluid particles pass through a treatment device and are discharged in the same sequence in which they enter; the particles remain in the tank for a time equal to the theoretical detention time.