

elevation head

Component of total dynamic head (TDH) described as the difference in elevation between the lowest effluent operational level in the dosing tank and the discharge point; the sum of elevation head and operating pressure constitutes the static head component of total dynamic head (TDH).