

level rod

Pole marked with a gradation facilitating the determination of a relative elevation for a point, typically constructed of wood and graduated in feet and tenths and hundredths of a foot; also known as a stadia rod.