

wicking

unsaturated flow on the surface of a media or soil particles which moves liquid from a location of greater moisture content to a location with lesser moisture content.