

chloramine

chemical compound present because of the chlorine disinfection process when the effluent contains ammonia; chloramines are relatively persistent in the environment and toxic to fish and amphibians.