

timer override

operating parameter under which a sensor directly activates the pump when the effluent level reaches a preset, excessively high level; pump operation continues in essentially demand mode until the effluent drops below the override sensor off elevation; the primary timer remains engaged but does not control activation until override sensor drops out; the timer override sensor operates on a demand basis.